Big Pay To Beet Growers

Early this week cheques went out from the Sugar Co. offices to beet growers for $1,083,000 odd dollars, being initial payment on 1938 beets. This was the largest single pay by long odds that has ever been made, and circulating in the beet raising areas of south-western Alberta will help farmers to settle a great many accounts, which will, in turn, assist business men to square up and so the circle goes.

Favored with exceptionally fine weather the deliveries of beets up to the cut-off date amounted to a goodly portion of the entire crop, and while sliced beets still are being hauled, the delivery per day is quite light and weighman at the mills with the present storm in progress will have a few days lay off from the routine of weights, tares, etc., etc.

Very good progress is being made at both Picture Butte and here in the manufacture of the sugar and the beets are at present testing between 17.5 and 18 per cent sugar.

Library Notes

This week we say "thank you" to Mrs. T. J. O'Brien for three books given to us.

NEW BOOKS—ADULTS
"My Son, My Son", by Howard Spring. An English book of the month Club. Are our children what we make them? Seldom has so much been crowded into 650 pages of reading. It is the life story of two fathers and their sons and covers the last half century of English life. Through it all runs the love of the fathers for their sons, their struggle from poverty to success in order that their boys might have all. The dramatic conflict of developing personalities sweeps the reader on to the final climax.

"Little Eagle—A Navajo Boy", by Armatrong Sperry. By the same writer as "Wagons Westward" and the Juniors who enjoyed it so much will be glad of this latest book.

BEST MAGAZINE ARTICLES
"Are there American Composers?" In Musical America for October.

The most asked for book of the week was "Malice of Men" by Deeping and Connor's books had the greatest circulation.

SELLING BETTER LIVING

Calvin Coolidge once related that when he was a boy in the hills of Vermont the only merchandise he saw was in the country store, but his horizon was broadened by the advertising of things that appealed to youth. With his desires aroused for the interesting and better things in life, he strove to obtain them. Asserting that advertising performs a distinct public service, Mr. Coolidge explained, "It is essential in the first instance to produce good merchandise but it is just as essential to create a desire for it." This, in a nut-shell is the service of advertising. As Calvin Coolidge implied, the most useful household appliance, the longest-wearing rubber tire, or the best mouse-trap in the world will never be popular if hidden from the public. We cannot have desires for things we do not know about. No motorist was concerned about having knee-action in his car until he learned about its advantage through advertising. Yet it represents a marked improvement in comfort.

A century ago it took a long time to introduce any improvement in the way of living. Even the example of President Fillmore, who installed the first bathtub in the White House in 1850, failed to make people bathtub-conscious. Fifty years later it still was an uncommon thing to have a bathtub in the home. The invention was there but people did not care about it until advertising got on the job and sold bathtubs. Then everybody wanted them, and today no home is complete without one.

Only short time ago our bath rooms were ugly as could be. Somehow no one thought of making them beautiful. But when manufacturers began to advertise artistic tile, tinted bathtubs, and beautiful plumbing fixtures, everybody realized how much pleasanter life can be with beauty in the bathroom.

Our parents and grandparents were well satisfied with the heavy staple foods of their time but we have learned to demand a balanced diet, with plenty of vitamins and minerals and a goodly assortment of light salads and tasty desserts to say nothing of out-of-season vegetables and fruits. Our food is much better today because advertising has changed our eating habits. Where do you suppose the radio industry would be if manufacturers had not advertised their receiving sets. Only fifteen years ago home radios were practically unknown. Few people cared about radio or thought it would ever amount to much. But the infant industry embarked on a tremendous advertising campaign, through newspapers, magazines, signs and circulars, and in a short time radio sets were introduced into four out of every five American homes. It's the same with many other articles. Millions brush their teeth because advertising sold them toothpaste, and many children have even been persuaded by advertising to wash their necks and eat their spinach. Better living comes not merely through natural desires, but through education.

A delightful two hours were spent at the home of Bishop and Mrs. James H. Walker Sunday evening after Conference when friends and neighbors gathered and enjoyed the company of Elder Chas. A. Callis and the other Salt Lake visitors. The experiences of Brother Callis during his many years of missionary service were very interesting.

Period Of Silence November 11th

Edmonton, Oct. 31 An official request for the observance of two minutes' silence at 11:00 a.m. Friday, Nov. 11, Remembrance Day, has been made by the Secretary of State at Ottawa in a communication received by Hon. J. C. Bowen, Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta. The letter states that his Majesty the King has approved of arrangements for the period of silence to be observed throughout the British Commonwealth. Accordingly, Dominion, provincial and municipal authorities are asked to arrange for the suspension of all vehicular traffic during the period of silence.

Quarterly Conference Convenes

Quarterly Conference of the Taylor Stake of Zion convened Saturday and Sunday last, with Elder Chas. A. Callis of the Council of the Twelve, Elder John D. Giles of the Young Men's Board, Pres. Mrs. Lucy Grant Cannon of the Young Women's Board and Mrs. Thos. Irvine of the Relief Society Board present from Salt Lake representing the General Boards of Relief Society and Mutuals, whose Conference it was.

The first Conference sessions were held Saturday evening at 7:30 in the Second Ward church, where departmental work of these two organizations was taken up.

The usual 2 p.m. session of the Conference was held at 10 a.m. Sunday, with Pres. T. Geo. Wodo in charge and Counselor Melvin T. King conducting the meeting. Elder Chas. A. Callis was on the stand representing the General Authorities. The Stake Choir was in attendance and rendered quite a number of pieces through the meeting. The opening song was "Onward Christian Soldiers" followed by prayer by Mrs. Myrtle Passey of the Relief Society. Presidency of the Stake Relief Society, after which the Choir sang "Gloria."

Stake Pres. Wood gave a brief report on the conditions of the Stake stating the tithing was up 35 per cent. in 1937 over 1936, fast offerings were up, and we now had 12 foreign missionaries in the field, and the Stake Presidency hoped to have 25 before many months. He felt that we should be very grateful for the good weather and the bounteous harvest we had enjoyed, and that our gratitude should be shown in a better payment of tithing this year than last.

Stake Clerk I. B. Roberts presented the Church authorities for the vote of the people, after which the Choir sang "The Pilgrim's Chorus."

Five minute testimonies were then asked for from the following speakers: Elder P. J. Christensen, an old-timer of Raymond, Mrs. Irvines, Elder John H. F. Green, Lethbridge, Mrs. Cannon, and Elder John D. Giles.

During and immediately following these speakers the Choir and congregation sang "How Firm a Foundation" and the Choir sang "Guide Us O Thou Great Jehovah."

Elder Callis spoke for half an hour on the subject of "Faith through Suffering." He related experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith in the early days of the Church, and several of his own experiences while presiding over the Southern States Mission, also experiences in bringing home dead missionaries to their families and the faith that always showed itself in the hour of suffering. His testimonies brought tears to many eyes during the course of his talk.

Pres. Wood announced the dedication of the Magrath First Ward Church at 4:30 in the afternoon, the afternoon meeting at 2 p.m. and the evening meeting at 7 p.m. The closing song was "Lead Kindly Light" and the meeting was dismissed by Elder H. Ostlund of the Lethbridge Stake Presidency.

After a brief session either from 2 until about 3 p.m. during which two minute talks were given by a number of speakers, the assembly divided again and the work of Mutual and Relief Society was taken up by the officers in charge.

YOUTH PROGRAM IN EVENING

The 7 p.m. meeting was devoted to the Youth program: all of the Mutual department excepting the Adults had a part on the program. Mark Dah spoke for the Explorers, Vern Fawns for the Gleamers and Harris Walker for the "M" Men. The theme was represented by a group of First Ward senior directed by Miss Dorothy Nurse.

Presentations were made by Mrs. M. W. Boyson and Mrs. Millie R. Dyson for having completed three years service in Bee Hive work. Special achievement awards were made to Magrath second, Welling and Raymond second wards for having every Scout registered and meeting the other M. I. A. requirements. The Raymond First received an achievement award for having both Scout Troops registered and for having taken part in the Silver Jubilee.

Inspiring talks were given by Elder John D. Giles and Mrs. Lucy Grant Cannon on the theme and Mutual Improvement work in general.

The Stake Choir was present again and rendered some very fine musical selections during the meeting.

Only about 40 shopping days until Christmas. Do your shopping early and get the worry off your minds.

Owing to the severity of the weather Town Council meeting has been postponed until next week.

About 3:30 this afternoon the wind came up and the snow was blowing wildly as night descended.

The frame work and part of the siding is on L. MacPhee's new house, and carpenter's are busy finishing the inside of Mrs. Fraser's home.

The Price of Peace

Prospering in your sheltered ease,
Bought by bitter agonies of war,
Ye, who see this year of peace
Cross the threshold of your door,
Ask yourselves the reason why
Countless warriors had to die?

Ask yourselves the cost in gold
In blood, in bitterness and woe,
Of those dark days whose tale is told
In burning heat and frigid snow—

Then, pay the need to heroes given
Whose flame of glory shines to heaven.

Keep faith with those, the sacred host,
Who left their shattered forms to rest
Neath distant, foreign skies and lost
All you have gained that they possessed;
They gave you all that they could give,
And by their sacrificial death you live—
"And they shall live forevermore."

A great many Raymond people were in Magrath on Sunday day to the dedicatory services of the Magrath First Ward Church. The building was packed to the doors for the meeting and very interesting talks were given by Bishop Ririe and Elder Callis of the Twelve offered the prayer of dedication for the fine new building, now completed and paid for, costing in all about $44,000. Congratulations to the Magrath people on their co-operation in completing their church house.

Hugh Stewart, 57 years, of Kimball, father of Mrs. Russell Nielson and Mrs. Albert Hague was accidentally killed on Tuesday at the farm home, when in a fall while tussling with one of his boys he struck his head on a pig trough, causing a fracture of the skull, from which he succumbed twenty minutes later, before medical assistance could arrive. Our sympathy goes out to the two daughters in their sorrow. Deceased was a successful and well-known farmer of the Kimball district and a new $5,000 home was in course of construction when the accident occurred.

Raymondites awoke Thursday morning to find a quiet snow storm in progress, about four inches having fallen during the night. Throughout the forenoon the fall continued, the flakes becoming smaller about 10 a.m. but still coming down steadily.

The ground, while frozen some according to reports, will likely absorb the moisture as the snow melts, and all in all the storm will do a great deal of good. Here's hoping we don't have one of those high west winds at least until the snow melts and settles so that it won't blow and drift.

THE THEATRES ON "QUEEN ELIZABETH"

Engineers of Western Electric Co., Ltd., London, this week began preparations for the installation of two "Mirrophonic" sound equipments in the two theatres of "Queen Elizabeth", giant new Cunard liner whose launching Sept. 27th was attended by Queen Elizabeth in person.

Special attention has been given to the amusement and physical culture facilities aboard the great ship, which has been hailed as likely to become the most famous luxury liner of the century. No fewer than 29 public rooms in all parts of the vessel will be given over to recreational pursuits and her two theatres have an aggregate seating capacity of 578. In addition to the installations of talking motion picture reproducing equipment, a full complement of accessories will complete the sound facilities including non-synchronous music attachments and an elaborate announcing system.

It is interesting to note that many Canadian Theatres are using Mirrophonic Sound Systems manufactured in Canada by Northern Electric, which is closely associated with Western Electric and the Bell Telephone Laboratories; and many of the modern film studios use Mirrophonic System for the production of their films.

"Mirrophonic" is a term applied to the new Sound System employing recently improved method for sound recording and reproduction and a decided improvement over the earlier methods of sound picture technique.

Miss Esther Kittlitz was the speaker at the Rotary meeting Monday last in the Sugar Bowl, giving a very interesting review of Halliburton's second book of Marvels, "The Orient." The talk was thoroughly enjoyed by the nearly perfect attendance of local Rotarians who were present. Next Monday's meeting will be held at the same place. Be there, ye Rotarians.

A soldier was brought to the hospital with a fractured thigh. Under the doctor's direction, one orderly took the patient by the leg and another by the shoulders and pulled the fracture into position. With the cold sweat of agony on his brow, the sufferer groaned:

ARMISTICE DAY

Twenty years ago today at 11 a. m. perhaps the hour that some may be reading this column of bursting shells, the thunder of cannon, and groans and moans of dying men were halted by the signing of the armistice, bringing to a halt the blood and carnage of war. During the four years of the world's cruellest and bloodiest struggle in history, hundreds of thousands of brave men gave up their lives, other countless thousands were maimed and crippled for life, and even today twenty years afterwards, vacant chairs at fireplaces of father husband, son and brother, bear record of the terrible price that was paid. For what?

True, the Armistice brought peace for a time. Nations had been so drained of finance and wealth that further conflict at the time was impossible. In the intervening years reparations, the repatriation of returned men and the care of the widow and the fatherless as a result of the struggle has occupied the attention of most nations. In the Armistice definitely did not bring what everyone hoped it would bring, a lasting peace, and a greater understanding amongst the nations of the world and their rulers.

Today as we contemplate this blessed event, and truly it is blessed, we see a bloody conflict between China and Japan, we see Spain torn asunder within herself, fighting for what? For what each side thinks is right, and what a price in life on both sides is being paid? And how can there possibly be two right sides to the same question. Perhaps no one will ever know how near the world came to another conflagration in the recent dispute between Germany and Czechoslovakia, and few really appreciate the heroism of the national figures who saved the day and maintained for an additional period at least a semblance of peace throughout the

We are far from world peace today. Fermentation in the Holy Land, between Hungary and Czechoslovakia, the dog eat dog attitude of one nation to another makes the entire set-up unstable and unsteady. As we bow our heads in reverence of the heroes uncounted who have died that we might live, let us also pray that a greater understanding may enter the hearts of men and nations to make secure that peace which was signed 20 years ago and cost such a price in life, misery and suffering.

The peace that will remain will only come when we are able to do "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

Our Edmonton Letter

(By T. B. Windross)

Edmonton, Nov.—The Social Credit party won the Athabaska bye election Monday, scoring the only victory it has achieved in the five non-acclamation by-elections since the party went into power in the 1936 general election. C. H. Tade, who was elected to the seat in 1935, won it again for Social Credit by defeating Rayner Whiteley Liberal candidate, by a reduced majority over his 500 majority in the 1935 voting.

When campaigning ended at the week-end, it was expected generally that the vote would be very close. Neither side was very confident of victory the Liberals, in fact believed that the odds against them were too great to allow a victory, and said that undoubtedly Athabaska was the riding most likely to return a Social Credit-er of all the ridings in the province.

They said that if the Aberhart machine could not win in Athabaska, it could not win anywhere in Alberta. Factors in the government's favor, they said, included these:

The fact that the bye-election was set for the "in-between" season in the north meant that fliers, trappers and traders many business men, miners, were absent from the riding.

Economic conditions in the north have not been good recently, and Social Credit promises of something-for-nothing were therefore likely to find favor.

Social Credit propaganda, including speaking tours by Aberhart and most of his cabinet and a flood of copies of Hon. Lucien Maynard's own weekly newspaper edited purposely for the electors, reached a new high mark.

Much provincial road work and Aberhart's announcement of a write-off of ancient debts owing to the government came at just the right time for Social Credit purposes.

There was one great factor in favor of the Liberal candidate it was declared, and that was that Mr. Whiteley himself is highly popular personally even with political opponents, whereas Mr. Tade, having been the dispenser of political patronage and relief and having been named as candidate after being defeated in the primaries was not so popular with voters.

It is not expected that the newly-elected member for Athabaska will be able to take his seat in the legislature session which opens next Tuesday (Nov. 15) because of the short time left to complete election formalities.

Reasons for the decision of the privy council declaring illegal the Aberhart government's attempt last fall to impose new operating in Alberta, in addition to the more than $200,000 which the banks already pay to the province, were made known over the weekend by the privy council in London, the Alberta attorney-general not having divulged the causes previously.

The judgement ruling out the tremendous tax was handed down in London in July, after the supreme court of Canada had likewise ruled in invalid. Stating the reason for its decision, the privy council explained, in a statement issued by Lord Maugham, the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain. The statement said:

"Under the guise of discriminatory taxation in a province, it would be easy not only to impair but even to render wholly nugatory the exclusive legislative authority of the dominion over a number of classes and subjects mentioned in section 91 of the British North American act) by making them valueless. No one would suggest—and certainly counsel for the appellant (that is, the Alberta government) did not suggest—that provincial legislation of this character would be valid.

"It is plain the taxation is aimed simply at banks, including savings banks. And within section 91, banking and savings banks are within the exclusive legislative authority of the dominion. On the other hand, it is strange to find a province singling out, in order to raise revenue for provincial purposes, banks and savings banks and no other wealthy corporation, body or person in the province."

It became known definitely during the last few days that the Aberhart government was planning some form of refunding policy for the province's $160,000,000 debt. Provincial Treasurer, Hon. Solon Low had been active in that direction for some time, but would never admit that his visits to the east and south had anything to do with refunding.

Unexpectedly, it became known that refunding plans had been placed in the care of two "experts," neither of them widely known to financial interests. One is a Californian, Harold B. Reed, of Los Angeles president of the Municipal Bonding company, of that city. The other is J. J. Sousa, whose address in orders-in-council passed by the cabinet providing for payment of expenses for the two "experts", is given as Calgary, although he also has lived in California until recently, it is stated.

The cabinet passed special warrants to provide slightly less than $2,000 for the use of these "experts" as a starter.

It is not expected in informed financial circles that the government of William Aberhart will ever get far with refunding schemes. The people who have the money to invest in new bonds have not the necessary confidence in Alberta's present administration's integrity. It is declared among them.

"The credit of the province has been ruined and must first be restored before refunding will succeed."

FOR ARMISTICE DAY

When the Armistice was signed November 11, 1918, which was supposed to have ended the terrible World War, was it really ended after all?

The dictionary defines "armistice" as "a brief suspension of hostilities by agreement." The word conveys the thought that the hostilities are quite likely to be renewed within a short time. It has sometimes seemed as if the world did not really stop fighting on November 11, 1918, but that a form of warfare has been carried on ever since, which might almost any time break out in violent hostilities.

What the world wants is peace, real peace, not any mere temporary suspension of hostilities because the combatants are out of breath and want to recover their wind before they proceed to batter each other some more.

The contentions of a time of theoretical peace have been so intense, that the fires have been kept alive, and will flare up again unless people have a care.

President T. Geo. Wood was in Coult's, early Monday morning having taken the Conference visitors from here to Coult's to catch the bus for Great Falls. The bus leaves Coult's at 7.30, and the party, including Elder Charles A. Callis of the Council of the Twelve and the other three Conference visitors left here at 5.30 a.m.

GOING TO THE DOGS

Archaeologists recently found an Egyptian tablets dating more than 2,000 years back, on which was inscribed the sad tale of tough times and despair for the future. So there's nothing unique about Sourpusses. Times have always been bad for some people. A lot depends on what you ate for breakfast.

Crying the blues may be a relief but it wastes a lot of energy. We'd rather take it for granted that the world hasn't gone to the dogs yet—and use that energy for motive power. Besides, feeling bad is a contagious disease—which might infect customers.

EXPERIMENTAL STATION LETHBRIDGE

WEEKLY LETTER

Growing Shelterbelt Trees Under Dry Land Conditions.

The relative worth of an effective shelterbelt of trees is easily realized particularly during high windstorms which are frequently experienced in southern Alberta. According to the inquiries received at the Lethbridge Experimental Station at this time of year, it would seem that a greater number of farmers are becoming more conscious of this fact. For this reason, it was thought that a short discussion of this subject would be timely.

In the Lethbridge and surrounding districts the prevailing winds are from the west and shelterbelts are generally located on the west side of the farmyard. As a rule it is not necessary to plant a shelterbelt on the south side since the one on the west has been found to intercept very effectively the southwest as well as the west winds. However, north of an imaginary line drawn through the southern districts of Gleichen and Bassano, there are more winds from the north and northwesterly directions in which case the shelterbelt is generally planted on the north as well as the west side.

Experience has shown that, although prairie soil is not naturally in the most inviting condition for the growing of trees it can be worked into a condition in which trees will grow successfully. In order to do this it is important that the soil be worked deeply and thoroughly several months prior to planting. At this Station, soil land if used for tree planting, is broken shallow early in the spring and backset 8 and 10 inches deep in mid-summer. If stubble land is used the land is summer-fallowed the year previous. An early spring start on this summer-fallow is very important and under no condition should it be delayed later than June 15.

Investigation from time to time has shown that the death of young shelterbelts is almost invariably due to neglect or improper care. In a well-cared for plantation, grass and weeds are never permitted to grow among the trees nor in fact, near them. A clean cultivation helps materially in discouraging grass to creep in on the trees. Weeds draw heavily on the soil moisture and it is therefore important that they be cultivated out while they are still small.

Evergreens such as spruce and pine, when well established, are more drought resistant than the ordinary sorts that shed their leaves. In the minds of individuals who think of evergreens in terms of the moist mountains or wooded areas, this statement may seem far-fetched. It is nevertheless a fact as has been amply demonstrated during the recent dry years on the Canadian prairies. The difficulty experienced by many in planting evergreens, it should be pointed out, could be greatly minimized if the prescribed planting instructions are faithfully followed. In these it is usually stressed that the roots must not be exposed to the dry air even for a minute.

Mixed plantings of rapid and slow growing trees such as a combination of the aspen, north-west poplar, greenash, elm and spruce, lend permanence to the shelterbelt. Much too often the farmer in his hurry to get a high shelterbelt, plants only the rapid-growing poplars which are generally short-lived and after a period of 8 to 15 years die out.

In well cared for shelterbelts, the soil is generally loose and if steps are not taken to hold it down it will soon be blown out by the wind. For this reason, at least, a row of caragana should be planted in every shelterbelt since the low bushy growth of this valuable shrub provides the necessary protection near the ground level.

IN SANTA CLAUS' PACK

Advance reports from the workshops of Santa Claus threaten changes in the type of toys that will fill this year's Christmas stockings. The younger generation, it is said, now demands realism in its toys. Their playthings must be patterned after the tools, machines and employments of the adult world.

A strange trend in toy manufacture is multiplication of miniature farm implements. Once a small boy's ambitious went no further than toy spade and bucket and a place to dig. Nowadays he wants a tractor, a disk harrow or a mechanical gang plow.

Equally in the realm of realism are the chemical sets, microscopes, printing presses and telephones designed to suit a small boy's fancy. And little girls, too, must have dolls that walk, talk and even blow bubbles.

Greatest gift for a child would be a vivid and ingenious imagination, capable of turning the crudest toy into a joy and treasure. But imagination, it seems, has gone out of fashion. Perhaps the next grown generation will be more practical, scientific and realistic because of the toys it plays with today. But for the same reason it may lack its share of artists, poets and dreamers.

Browned Chicken Fiddle Lyonnaise

1 can Canadian Chicken Fiddle
2 cups cooked, diced potatoes
2 tablespoons minced onions
1 teaspoon prepared mustard or Worcestershire sauce
Dusting of paprika
2 tablespoons butter
1 hard-cooked egg, chopped
1 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter

Heat the potatoes in the butter. Add the hard-cooked egg, and onions. Combine the milk and seasonings. Add to the potatoes. Flake the fish and add. Push to one side of the frying pan, melt the rest of the butter, cover the pan and cook until well browned. Fold over and serve very hot.

Serve with a relish of pickled beets or stewed tomatoes.

DON'T OVERCOOK FISH

Miss Hazel J. Freeman, Dominion Government Cookery expert says: "The clear, cold waters of our northern lakes and two great oceans make Canadian fish exceptionally fine in flavor."

"The secret in cooking fish," says Miss Freeman, "lies in having the heat—whether electric, gas, kerosene or coal stove—hot enough to broil or bake them quickly, and above all not too long. Of course, the timing is to the cook, and it is this very timing that marks the difference between having fish that is cooked to perfection, or stewed until it has lost its heart and soul and that indescribable something that makes the family welcome fish with gusto. So watch the fish and when the flesh is firm and tender, when the connective tissue holding the fibres together is gelatinous, that's the time to stop. Fish should be cooked until the fish is done. Each flake of the fish may be pulled apart on loose folds, full of its own flavoursome juices. For fillets one inch or less in thickness, it takes 10 minutes in a hot oven (500 degrees F.), whether the fish weighs one pound or five."

THE ANNUAL HINT

Already the stores are preparing to receive shoppers—not necessarily Christmas shoppers although they are ready for them, too. From physical evidences there is plenty to choose from, especially necessities. The advertisements show, even this soon, an unconquerable optimism, a distinct feeling that the worst is over.

To get it said—do your shopping early. Advice like this is always good as the climacteric season nears. To take it means that there will be no rush at the end, even for people not so well situated financially, as others. Spreading the cost more thinly will make it easier in the final reckoning. Get set now, and you will experience a more leisurely approach; the "last minute" will not be so strenuous.

There will, of course, be the usual Christmas Eve shoppers but if you can do so, do not number yourself among them. Remember, some of your gifts may have to make long journeys, and you can always tag them "Do Not Open Until Christmas."

ADVERTISING LINAGE GROWS

Advertising linage in newspapers has shown a healthy growth in recent weeks, and this is regarded as the most reliable business barometer. No doubt you have noticed it. Advertisements are larger, and there are more of them.

The reason advertising volume is accepted as a good harbinger of business prospects is because merchants advertise more when they believe business is headed for an upturn. They have learned that when business starts to expand, the business firms that advertise get the cream of the new trade.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By
H.G.L. Strange

Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

"What d'you think of this wheat," asked an Elevator Agent.
"That's a lovely-looking sample," I said, "Plump off a fine deep red color. Why, that's almost show wheat."

"Sure it is," said the Agent, "and it's also a good joke on you."

"Why?" I asked.

"Well, that comes from a field that you classed as no good last summer. You said it was Little Club wheat, and that the quality was terrible. Now you say it's fine."

"Can you get me about a pound of wheat of another variety from the same farm?" I asked.

"Sure I can," said the Agent. "I can get you some Thatcher, but what will that prove?"

"Let's wait and see," I said. The pound of Thatcher arrived. This, with a pound of the Little Club was made into loaves of bread by the Dominion Cereal Laboratory.

The loaf made from the Thatcher wheat is tall and light of a nice cream colour, and has an appetizing appearance. The loaf made from the Little Club is about half as tall only, is dense and heavy-looking, the crumb looks unappetizing and it is as yellow as a dandelion. "Well" said the Agent, "It looks as though wheat varieties are just like people. You can't tell their quality or worth by the looks of them!"

Following factors have tended to lower price: Large arrivals of wheat in Europe -- Roumania and U.S.A. continue pressing subsidized wheat for export -- World has largest rye crop in recent years -- Rains relieve dryness in Balkans -- Large exports of carobs (beans) from Cyprus to Egypt -- Argentine corn being pressed on Liverpool market.
